The government intends to adopt several measures to digitize and debureaucratize the administration, including the fiscal one, according to the National Investment and Economic Recovery Plan, presented today. At ANAF, the measures mainly aim at connecting online cash registers with ANAF servers, introducing the standard control file (SAF-T), modernizing the ANAF website, but also that of the Ministry of Finance, but also simplifying the online payment of tax obligations.

A long-awaited measure for the digital transformation of the tax administration is the project to connect electronic fiscal cash registers . The process started in May 2020. The calendar for connecting cash registers with electronic diary starts with the period July 1-September 30, 2020 for the category of large taxpayers. From September 30 to January 31, 2021, the electronic fiscal cash registers used by economic operators in the category of medium and small taxpayers will be connected. Through this project the information from the economy will be received in real time, and the data will be used in the analysis process.

Another important step for the computerization of ANAF is represented by the SAF-T project . This standard control file contributes to improving the quality of the the digitization of Romania, the legal entities have the possibility to make payments with the bank card on the ghiseul.ro platform. Another new element is represented by the interconnection of the Virtual Private Space with the ghiseul.ro platform for the benefit of the over 1.3 million SPV users.

Another objective is the modernization of the mfinante.gov.ro and anaf.ro platforms. A partnership with the NGO Code4Romania was started for the website of the Ministry of Public Finance. The project was started in May, the new interface of the site will be implemented in about 3 months. The new portal will meet the highest standards at European level in terms of UX / UI and will set a new level of user quality in terms of government sites in Romania.

The digital transformation of the tax administration and the Treasury aims to eliminate travel, queues at the physical counter and turn them into clicks on electronic devices. Computerization will lead to a simple interaction with state authorities. The results of digitization will translate into a greater degree of transparency, better collection of taxes, a lower rate of tax evasion, efficiency and debureaucratization of institutions.

service to provide digital access without asking companies for information held by other institutions. For example, ONRC will be able to provide services by obtaining information directly from ANAF, the Ministry of Internal Affairs or other structures of the Ministry of Justice. This will make it possible not only to provide faster public services, but also to increase the fairness of public action towards taxpayers, with effects in reducing administrative errors that translate into net costs for businesses. The value of the project is estimated at 10 million euros;

Generalizing the use of electronic signatures at the level of civil servants in public administration, so that they can communicate digitally with companies, reducing reaction time and facilitating the early correction of possible errors;

The development of an effective single point of contact will increase the visibility of public services, having as main effect the decrease of the time for searching for information by companies and with the advantage of encouraging the unification of administrative practice in relation to companies and citizens. The value of the project is estimated at 5 million euros;

The introduction of the electronic identity card and other electronic identification schemes will allow complete remote interaction with the public administration, with the clear effect of lowering costs. The value of the project is estimated at 20 million euros;

Migration of public services in a government cloud, in order to reduce the costs of companies in interaction with the state and, in the long run, even the need to finance services. The value of the project is estimated at 45 million euros;
